Abstract

Hahnemann devotes six paragraphs and two notes of the Organon to highlight how extraordinarily important mind symptoms are when individualizing both patients and their illnesses, and also when selecting the most similar remedies. Later on, the special value of mind symptoms was confirmed and emphasized by Boenninghausen, and specially by Kent. Paradoxically, however, it is exactly in determining, understanding and interpreting these mind symptoms that the greatest difficulties, mistakes and discrepancies among homeopathic physicians occur. It is therefore essential to have a Systematic Homeopathic Semiology (SHS) to be able to resolve and correct these difficulties. The SHS is an integral part of Dr. Cámpora's methodology, the Homeopathic Formula for the Diagnosis of the Simillimum, which enables physicians to understand and clarify patients' expressions during the consultation, and to learn how to correctly and precisely translate them into rubrics in the Repertory. Videoclips of cured mind symptoms are here presented in order to illustrate and teach the meaning of several repertorial rubrics, and also to verify some of the remedies in them.
